One night while Northcott was asleep, Jessie learned from Sanford that Northcott had killed four boys at his ranch. I often have a hard time rating true crime.

He used that and the fact that the boy was in the US illegally to keep Sanford from Retrieved March 27, Records of the city of Saskatoon indicate that he died on June 20,[9] and was buried in the Saskatoon Woodlawn Cemetery on August 26, Unfortunately, sadists and psychotics like Stewart Northcutt are still with us. Forced by Northcott to take part in the murders, Sanford carried tremendous Clark also testified about the murder of a fourth boy, a Mexican, where Northcott had forced Clark to help dispose of the head by burning it in a fire pit and then crushing the skull. This book isn't really about Gordon Northcott.
