The more books I read in this series the more I want to read. Madelyn Beecher left New Bern twenty years ago and never looked .

I was a little disconcerted when I realized the main characters from the previous book are now friends. This book is a refreshing change of pace about two old friends who reconnected again 30 years later after an incident in middle school that caused a split between the two of them. Sisterhood again saves the day for Tessa and Madeline; quilting is the means by which they reconnect. They'd given up everything to come back to New Bern from Boston and start their lives. This is her once-happy thirty-four-year marriage to Lee. Anyone that has enjoyed Debbie Macomber's books.
