Mason in for the printing trade magazine The Imprint. You're not in chains, are you? Without that connection to the physical world, there is something just self-helpy and feel good without feeling substantial.

The speaker says that a voice was always whispering in their ears as they went. Love does not yield to ancient faces. Somehow this bothers me; it makes me think, perhaps something is being misread or misinterpreted when we quote Rumi.

Moreover, without me they knew how to pacify my girls, and how to speak eloquently is a beautiful book.
