We drink it thinking it's healthier and better for us than the water that comes out of our sinks. Bottled water is seductive. When we are done with the bottles, they typically go into landfills. But what makes us do it anyway? Cleveland tap water had no measurable arsenic. Among the issues he has addressed are conflict Dr.

Will we abandon our commitment to providing safe public tap water? And I think that's what Gleick was going for with Bottled and Sold: It provides good authoritative data to reference in conversations or writing.
