When it finally arrived in Germany, English authors became the models for German literature to follow during the latter half of the 18th century, after the influence of French Classicism had faded.

A particular form of Renaissance architecture in Germany is the Weser Renaissance. Although known mainly as the author of the epic Der Messias, Friedrich Gottlieb Klopstock was in fact the major poet of the German Enlightenment, liberating lyric poetry from the standing rules and stressing innovative language, images, and metres. Islam, major world religion promulgated by the Prophet Muhammad in Arabia in the 7th century ce. When Goethe accepted a civil service position at the Die Lehrjahre eines Humanisten (German Edition) of the duke of Saxony-Weimar in this conservative turn by one of the leading figures of the movement marked the end of the Sturm und Drang movement as a period of generational protest.

Holbein's well known series of small woodcuts on the Dance of Death related to was more affected by the violence of his period than any other German writer and made the display of violence a central topic of his works. Then came the literary periodicals, as edited by Lessing and others; these concentrated on aesthetics.
