We have sinned inwardly and outwardly. I will continue to pray that your eyes of understanding will be opened. There will be tribulation and distress forever for every soul of man who does evil. You It was addressed to people living in Rome, the political and economic capital of the Roman Empire. Redemption in Rome, the first century Roman Empire. We have sinned knowingly and unknowingly. Since no sin can enter heaven and only the righteous can enter, we can see how important this is. What irony to perpetuate it by using what he wrote. Most Christians have missed it, the world we see around us does not confirm our hope. Quite a remarkable statement!
